Project Wan features 25 villas nestled in a lush forest in Salvador, where nature leads the design.

Using terracotta, which ages beautifully, and a natural water flow system that brings the gentle sound of streams, we honour the land's essence.

Surrounded by towering trees, rocks, and rich greenery, the villas invite light and blend effortlessly into the forest, creating a serene retreat grounded in harmony with the earth.

Senses

FOREST

At Project Wan, the forest is integral to the design, where the villas are nestled within 3 acres of natural greenery. Instead of altering the landscape, we've preserved it, creating a peaceful sanctuary surrounded by trees and wildlife. The result is a seamless blend of architecture and untouched nature.

TERRACOTTA

High grade Terracotta, a core element at Project Wan, was chosen for its organic beauty and timeless quality. Over time, this natural material will darken, allowing the villas to blend effortlessly into the surrounding forest. Its earthy tones complement the greenery, creating a harmonious connection between the architecture and the natural landscape.

WATER

Water plays a vital role in enhancing the peaceful ambience at Project Wan. A natural water flow system meanders through the property, mimicking the gentle sound of a flowing stream. This design choice not only adds peace but also reinforces the villa's connection to the surrounding forest and natural environment.
